SEPORTS FROM COMMODORE FOOTE.

St. Louis, April 25.—The Democral's correspondent with Commodore Foote says that on Tuesday night and the one previous an attack upon the fact was expected from the rebels. The apprehension arose from a describer's story, which represented them busily engaged in congregating their gunboats, reinforches their crees, and in other respects very active, with a purpose of this raid in view.

Thirty surgeons leave here this evening for Pittsburg, on the steamer Black Hawk. From the best information to be obtained, I am enabled to state that the great suraggle at Corinth will probably come off between Sanday and Wafnersday next. There is no longer any doubt that Van Dorn and Price have abandoned Missouri.

A gentleman who was in Memphis a few days ago, saw and conversed with several persons belonging to Price's army, with whom he was acquainted, and reports that the whole rebel force, which accounts recently placed at Jacksonport, Arkanase, has arrived in Test nessee.

avoid it. Slavery is the came of this war. There is not among the easilre list of the enemies of the Federal Government one rebel who is an Aboltionist. There is not one in arms or in the councils of the Confederacy who deems man selling a crime and Human Chattellism a blot upon the humanity of the age. To a man they are the defenders of the institution of slavery in behalf of which they have almed a blow at the existence of the Government. And now that the question is pending of a penalty to be adjusted to the crime, from what source comes the opposition? Who are the men in Washington and throughout the land that are vigorously working and declaiming against the progress of the Government in the punishment of traitors? As of the class before named, so there is perity, and has now brought the Governmen are shrewd enough to see that the punishment of traitors will fall upon slave-holders only. That the confiscation act carried out will liberate the bulk of all the slaves of the South, leaving to the chattels of the small moiety of Union slaveholders posed to such a measure. It would re than the death knell of slavery. It that it should be exempt from the punish-ment it has richly carned? Is the institution in itself enough of a glory to our na-tion to atone for the diagrace that must fall upon a Government which having the power and the pressure of a necessity to -or rather from timidity and lack of pronounced by the humanity of our age, the sum of all villainies. the poor man or any one else, ex-cept rich rogues and lawyers who pratice in the criminal courts. Under pratice in the criminal courts. Under our present Constitution, before the poorest man can be placed upon trial for a crime, the law provides that twenty-three grand jurers (our most substantial citizens and persecution from enemies and addictive persons—and it also secures prosecution against real criminals, are faver or affection on the part of the and oppress a poor man at the pub-ense. A Grand Jury would not so be deceived or influenced. Is is not to influence one man than twenty-

Government in the punishment of traitors?
As of the class before named, so there is not among these last, one man who is not a lover of slavery. They are the Davises and Wickliffes of Kentucky, the Vallandighams of the North, who with a fidelity worthy of a better cause, are instant and the property of the property o twice before he can be punished; and every poor man must be punished with only one conviction, unless he can pay for

Grand Juries are established to save expense, it is said. Will not the cost of try-ing cases over again on appeal be ten times as much as the cost of finding indictments. All criminal prosecutions are carried on at the public expense from necessity, as no one could afford to pay these expenses on his own account. Now as any man can prosecute his enemies at the public expense by making an affidavit of some crime, these cases will largely increase in number, and so the expense will be greater than the Grand Juries on the score of increase of frivalous and malicious cases. A Grand Jury ignore such bills, but a party prosecutes and makes cost and trouble without a Grand Jury to restrain him.

Will not the difficulty and uncertainty of coneiction increase the amount of crime? Cannot a rich criminal defeat justice entirely by worrying out witnesses, and by con-tinuances and delays? Does not the cost of each trial amount to ten times more than the cost of finding the indictment? Besides, who is to examine jails and public buildings and prevent nulsances? Who will protect prisoners from the neglect and ill usage of jailers and officers? I am no friend to the economy that places the hands of a single man. It may be cheaper, but our liberties are safest in the hands of many. The masses must be educated to fill the public places and to know the laws and their duties as citizens. They can only be educated by being placed in responsible positions. Our people are ben-effited more than the cost to the public, by being placed upon Grand and Petit Juries.

If the great object of government is to save expense, why not abolish Petit Juries as well as Grand Juries? It would be cheaper to have all these criminal cases decided by a indee than by a jury and decided by a indee than by a jury and taking the West together, fully three-quarters of the man, and one interested in this matter, I propose to examine some of its claims to the above title.

I am not aware that the poor man exects or desires anything from organic or ther laws but protection; and a guarantee that all persons shall be held allies aware. with a single judge or justice, who might be influenced or prejudiced by political or personal considerations. The Wheeling Intelligencer quotes protection. upon trial, than to be publicly arrested and dragged before a judge and publicly tried on a mere affidavit of any man? This must take place under the new Constitution. The judge must be compelled by law to arrest you by his warrant, publicly, on any man's affidavit without any discretion at all; or clse he must have a discretion at all; or clse he must have a discretion at all; or clse he must have a discretion at all contains the man are affidavit without any discretion at all contains a discretion at a discretion at all contains a discretion at a discretion at a discretion at a discretion at all contains a discretion at a tion at all; or clase he must have a discretion to arrest you or not, as he pleases.

If he must arrest you, on an affidavit being public accusation of crime; and you are to made, then you are to be diagraced by a public accusation of crime; and you are to be publicly tried, although the fudge may be satisfied that you are entirely innocent! (What a shame and diagrace to the laws.)

But even this is better than to give the laws, and which is better than to give the laws.)

But even this is better than to give the judge a discretion to put a party upon trial or not, as he thinks proper in his discretion. It is an old maxim that, "That "law is best that leaves least to the discretion of the judges." Even if the judges were always pure and honest and capable—they would be suspected of political and personal prejudice—and the administration they would be suspected of political and personal prejudice—and the administration of justice ought to be entirely above suspicion. But of the one hundred judges to be elected in this State, probably all would not be above the reach of influence. Judges are but men, and no man should be entrusted with such a discretion.

Twenty-three men make a tribunal on whom this discretion may be more safely lodged. They do not arrest or disgrace a man unless they find him guilty from all the evidence. This tribunal has existed enturies. "Let us hold fast to that which

But the "Little Arch Jay-Hawker," as some see fit to term Jennison, has tendered his resignation because, as he says, he does not think he can render his country true service under the officers and circumstances that he is placed, as he is ordered to give up those deeds of forfeiture taken by him has winter, to the grantors—and large bills are being allowed for payment to the very worst of secessionists, for property taken and destroyed by him during his last winter's campaign, even the noted Sam Hays, in whose very house Lieut. Bostwick and Capt. Berchard of our regiment were assassinated by his brother, Capt. Upton Hays, and his company of rebels who are now with Price—is to have pay from the Government for his property confiscated by Jennison last winter.

The pleasant weather for the past few days has pretty thoroughly dried up the mud in the camp, and the place begins to look like a proper babitation for human beings.

The Scotch Regiment, Col. D. Cameron, has lately received numerous accessions to its ranks and now numbers nine hundred men.

They are a flue-appearing collection of soldiers, and do hunor to the discretion of an old newspaper man who has had the selection of the materials for the formation of his com-mand. The regiment is well officered, well clothed, well supplied with overything except arms, and one of the staff is to leave for Washington in a few days to procure muskets or rifles of the best quality and description. We were particularly struck, upon the occasion of a visit to the barracks of this body yesterday, with the orderly and extremely tidy condition in which we found the tables, dishes, cooking apparates, floors, beds, and in fact everything within the walls of their barracks. The food -supplied in abundance by the Government-is cooked, not over pits dug in the ground, as is cooked, not over pits dag in the ground, as is sometimes the case in camps, but upon stoves, ranges, and before old-fashioned fire-places. All is kept as sweet and cleanly as though passing under the eye of the most acrupalous housewife, evidencing the presence of the proverbial Scottish thrift and neatness so noticeable among the mountains and crags of old Scotia.
